TUESDAY EVENING, JUNE 12

TAIL-CUTTING IN CHINA.—From the China papers it appears that the "tail-cutting epidemic," as it is called, has broken out at Peking. "The Mandarins," says in a letter in the Celestial Empire, have put up a notice offering fifty taels reward for the apprehension of a tail-cutter; but this will hardly have much influence, for the people are persuaded that the agency is supernatural.

Death is said to follow the loss of the tail within three days; several cases of death are reported, and it is difficult to believe that there have been deaths must be the effect of fright, the prophecy, as in so many cases, bringing about its own fulfillment. It is common now in the streets to see men with their tails wound around their heads or hanging over the shoulder in front. Chatterbox, who is an unfailingly distributed freely. One man showed me a chain, when I told him I had a better one, which was to wear the hair after the western fashion; but he replied, "Then they would cut off our ears."

The Peking correspondent of the Shanghai Daily News says that two of the eunuchs of the palace there have been mysteriously deprived of their tails, and such an occurrence taking place within the precincts of the forbidden city naturally increased the prevailing alarm.

The druggists' shops were thronged by eager purchasers of ointment, which is an unfailingly item in the prescriptions for charms to be worn about the person, and many Chinese were afraid to venture out of doors.
